river and the large cities of the State.

We have had with us this month three men prominent in National affairs. The perennial candidate and chronic four-flusher, Wm. J. Bryan, made the oratorical effort of his life on Independence Day to convince the common herd that the Divine right of Kings and Kaisers to kill innocent neutrals, at will, should not be questioned by a measiy Republic, but there was an undercurrent of feeling against him among his 40,000 hearers that made his speech fall flat, and no one felt it more than Bryan. A few so-called German-Americans cheered his speech lustily, but aside from that his speech lustily, but aside from that Paints and Oils at A. Rieke & Son's. his reception was a cold one. The Iroquois Club, the largest and oldest Democratic organization on the Pacific Coast, snubbed him by passing a resolution "indorsing unequivocally the foreign policy of President Wilson" and refusing to recognize Bryan country from the car windows of which can be seen more magnificent scenery than from The Scenic Limited, the new, all-steel, through train over the Misson" and refusing to recognize Bryan warmly and whole-heartedly received by everybody, regardless of political affiliations, race, creed or color. He was the principal speaker on Liberty was the principal speaker on Liberty Bell Day at the fair, and his speech on that occasion was a classic. More than 100,000 persons listened to him and at the close of his speech almost over Great Sait Lake and the famous fought for an opportunity to shake his hand.

Teddy Roosevelt was also warmly received on "Roosevelt Day," California being the greatest, and possibly the last, Progressive stronghold. His speech on "War and Peace" before an audience of 60,000 was truly American, and his method of "Damning the Mollycoddles" was refreshing and typically Roosevaltien.

her room, waited until she went to sleep at night, and then began to jump against the window screens and buzz, making a terrible noise. "Will, is that you? Can't you get in? The door is not locked."

No answer came, and she got up and struck a light—looked about and saw THE BEETLE. She knew him, or thought she did, and dropped a handkerchief over him so she could not him into a tumbler such as you put him into a tumbler such as you have your iced tea served in.

have your iced tea served in.

She turned the glass upside down in the middle of her dresser, tilted a very little for air, and went to bed teeling glad she could return that beetle to you. She was awakened later by a clinking of something against the pitcher of ice water on the corner of the dresser. Now you will find this hard to believe, but it is true; a light showed that the beetle had jumped that tumbler until it hit the pitcher.
